Investors Savings Bank Foundation Supports Community Theater Educational Outreach

MORRISTOWN, N.J. — The Investors Savings Bank Foundation has awarded a $5,000 grant to The Community Theater at Mayo Center for the Performing Arts, a cultural fixture on South Street for many years.

The grant will support the Theater's Performing Arts Company, a troupe of two dozen youth performers between the ages of 12 and 18. Under the guidance of a music director and other staff, the young singers give dozens of free performances at various not-for-profit events and institutions throughout the region annually. Recent shows have included a performance for oncology patients at the Carol G. Simon Cancer Center at Morristown Memorial Hospital, and at the Morristown Neighborhood House, which supports after-care and preschool programs for underprivileged children. The group represented the region at the New Jersey Division of Travel & Tourism Fall for New Jersey Store in Manhattan, and has performed on The Mayo Center's stage with a variety of artists, including composer Marvin Hamlisch.

"Our arts education program gives teens and young adults an opportunity to perfect their craft while learning about the importance of giving back to our community," said Allison Larena, President and CEO of The Community Theatre at Mayo Center for the Performing Arts. "We are all very grateful for the generous support of the Investors Savings Bank Foundation in helping to make this outreach possible."

"The Investors Savings Bank Foundation is committed to supporting non-profit programs that enhance the neighborhoods the bank serves," said Kevin Cummings, the bank's President and CEO. "We applaud the outstanding work of The Community Theater in using the performing arts to enrich the lives of people young and old."
