I grew up in Bernardsville, New Jersey, and attended Bernards High School, graduating in 2001 in the top 20 in my class. I went on to James Madison University in Harrisonburg, Virginia and graduated in 2005 with a Bachelors of Business Administration degree in Finance and a concentration in Business Law and European Business.

After college, I worked for the New York Yankees organization from June of 2006 through June of 2008 as the Coordinator of Financial Operations, working directly under the CFO. I was involved in a variety of financial and special projects related to the Yankees organization, including the construction of the new stadium, Major League Baseball revenue sharing, and the Yankee-Steiner Collectibles agreement.

After working for the Yankees, I joined The Hampshire Companies in July of 2008 and still work there today. I initially started as a Financial Analyst on the Institutional side of the business. I was focused on building property level proformas as well as Fund level proformas tracking the progress of the overall Funds performance. I eventually moved up to an Investment Manager, in which, I oversaw the leasing, capital expenditures, and property management aspects of approximately 20 assets in and around the Tri-state area. After about 5 years on the institutional side, I moved to the Legacy/Family side of the business. In my current role, I am a Senior Asset Manager, I oversee all leasing and property management aspects for approximately 100 properties across the country. I am also involved on the financings and dispositions of assets within our Funds.

Outside of work, I enjoy spending time with my three kids and extended family. Luckily, most of my family lives within an hour of us in New Jersey so we are able to get together often. Travelling has also been a big passion of mine. Growing up, we travelled as a family to a great deal of exotic destinations including Peru, Kenya, Namibia, Zimbabwe, Papua New Guinea and the North Pole. Having a family of my own now, I want to instill the same sense of travel and adventure to my kids so we try to go to different places at least once or twice a year as a family. And eventually, I would love to expand our travel destinations overseas when the kids are old enough.
